: MOTION FOR ENTRY OF

The First Bank and Trust Company ("First Bank"), by and through its undersigned counsel, moves the Court for permission to remove publicly filed documents from the strictures of the Order Granting Motion for Entry of Stipulated Confidentiality Agreement (Doc. No. 731). As set forth below, the Metcalfe Circuit Court, in connection with the criminal proceedings against Thomas Gibson and other former participants in Eastern Livestock Co., LLC, has ordered thousands of pages of Eastern Livestock banking records from Fifth Third Bank to be released to the public. As such, there is no reason to apply the strictures of this Court's Order (Doc. No. 731) to such records and the Court should immediately order that they are exempted.

1. The United States justice system prides itself on open access to the public. Certainly, there are some limited circumstances in which the public's right to know is outweighed by the clear and convincing risk of harm potentially caused by the disclosure of highly protected trade secrets. Accordingly, Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) carves out an exception for trade secrets and allows courts to fashion protective orders restricting the way in which such information is to be revealed. On September 30, 2011, this Court entered an Order Granting Motion for Entry of Stipulated Protective Order to facilitate the open exchange of discovery in these proceedings while still preserving the rights of the parties to protect sensitive information (the "Protective Order"). The actions of Fifth Third Bank ("Fifth Third"), however, have abused this Order and Fifth Third is now attempting to use it in a way that unfairly restricts and prejudices the parties.

2. Specifically, Fifth Third Bank ("Fifth Third") has stamped tens of thousands of pages of documents it produced with the legend "confidential" and has designated virtually every page of testimony given by its witnesses as "confidential." Fifth Third is improperly attempting to cloak all of its conduct under a shroud of secrecy even though a "significant public interest exists" with respect to the losses resulting from the collapse of Eastern Livestock,. See December 22, 2011, Order Designating Certain Discovery Materials a Matter of Public Record; Order Designating Certain Discovery Materials as Confidential, and Protected by a Protective Order; and Order Designating Certain Discovery Materials as Confidential Pending Trial and Subject Only to Disclosure by Counsel for Defendants Pursuant to RCr 5.24, Commonwealth of Kentucky v. Gibson, et al., Nos. 11-CR-00048, 11-CR-00049, 11-CR-00050, 11-CR-00051 (Metcalf Cir. Ct.) ("Metcalf Order") (attached as Exhibit A), p. 1.

3. Fifth Third's misuse of the Protective Order has already resulted in harm to First Bank, and needless expenditure of judicial resources. In this regard, First Bank has recently commenced a direct action against Fifth Third in state court in Hamilton County, Ohio. In connection with that action, Fifth Third has taken the extraordinary measure of moving the Ohio court for an order to "seal" the complaint in its entirety – even though the allegations disclose no trade secret of Fifth Third and attach no documents stamped "confidential" – simply because Fifth Third "believes" the evidence pleaded came in large part from documents produced in discovery pursuant to this Court's Protective Order. Of course, the Ohio state court will address this motion after an appropriate hearing under Ohio Rule of Superintendence 45 governing the procedure for filing court materials "under seal."¹ But, this demonstrates the lengths to which Fifth Third will go to conceal its activity and the misuses of this Court's Protective Order. Moreover, on May 31, 2012, Trustee James Knauer posted a blog entry on his Eastern Livestock Bankruptcy website to bring the state court complaint to the attention of all of Eastern Livestock's creditors and included a link to a PDF version of the complaint. This certainly supports the notion that the allegations of the complaint contain no violation of this Court's Protective Order as the Trustee endorses at least the public disclosure of the allegations for his constituents.

4. For purposes of this Motion, First Bank reserves its right to compel public disclosure of all of the documents improperly designated by Fifth Third as "confidential" and to require Fifth Third to meet its burden of proving that the information contained therein should be protected from disclosure under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c). But, at the very minimum, this Court should now exempt from the strictures of its September 30, 2011 Protective Order the numerous documents that the Metcalfe Circuit Court has already deemed open to the public domain, as described below.

5. In this regard, on December 22, 2011, Metcalfe Circuit Court Judge Phil Patton ordered the Kentucky Attorney General to produce two separate sets of documents: (1) redacted versions of some 18,000 pages of Eastern Livestock banking records from Fifth Third that would be made available to the public and (2) the remaining documents to be categorized as confidential and subject to the protective order contained in the Metcalfe Order. Metcalfe Order, pp. 2-3. Paragraph 1 of the Metcalfe Order states, in relevant part, that "[a]ll bank records of Eastern Livestock Co., LLC at Fifth Third Bank contained in the discovery materials identified by the Commonwealth herein shall be redacted as soon as practical by the Commonwealth . . . and made a matter of public record." Metcalfe Order, p. 2 (emphasis added). In March, 2012, the Kentucky Attorney General tendered to the Metcalfe Circuit Clerk of Courts versions of those documents, with private banking information redacted.² Paragraph 4 of the Metcalfe Order, which specifically addresses confidential materials, applies only to the "remaining discovery documents and all audio recordings of non-defendants." Id. at p. 3 (emphasis added). In January, 2012, the Kentucky Attorney General tendered to the Metcalfe Circuit Clerk of Courts these "remaining" documents, which are subject to the protective order under paragraph 5 of the Metcalfe Order. On May 30, 2012, counsel for First Bank contacted Jeffrey R. Prather, a Kentucky Assistant Attorney General involved in the Metcalfe County Circuit Court case, seeking clarification regarding the documents made available pursuant to paragraphs 1 and 4 of the Metcalfe Order. Mr. Prather confirmed that the materials produced in January, 2012, consisting of audio recordings and other documents, were considered "confidential" under the terms of the Metcalfe Order as they were produced pursuant to paragraph 4. Asst. A.G. Prather also confirmed that all of the documents that were produced in March, 2012, were provided

² The documents contain redactions made by the Kentucky Attorney General as well as redactions originally made by Fifth Third under claims of attorney-client privilege and attorney work product. First Bank does not concede that Fifth Third's redactions are appropriate and Fifth Third must meet its burden of proving privilege and work product. But, for the limited purposes of this motion, the documents, as redacted by both Fifth Third and the Kentucky Attorney General, should be exempted from the Court's Protective Order.

pursuant to paragraph 1, and were made a matter of public record. The March, 2012, production consisted of redacted versions of documents with alphanumeric labels FT000001 through FT018355. These documents are available to the public through Metcalfe Circuit Clerk of Courts Laura Rigdon without any restriction or requirement to consent to limitations on their use or viewing.

6. At least forty-five of the documents marked as exhibits by Special Counsel to the Trustee and used in the Rule 2004 Examinations have been made a matter of public record pursuant to this production under the Metcalfe Order. See Chart: Rule 2004 Examination Exhibits v. Documents Made a Matter of Public Record in Commonwealth of Kentucky v. Thomas Gibson, et al. (Metcalfe County Circuit Court) (attached as Exhibit B). Accordingly, this Court should find that these documents that have already been made a matter of public record and should be exempted from any procedures set forth in the September 30, 2011 Protective Order.

7. Even though the Court can address this motion based solely on the public disclosure ordered by Hon. Judge Patton, a review of the terms of the Protective Order and Fifth Third's misplaced reliance upon it bears analysis. The Protective Order addresses "Confidential Material" and requires such to be filed under seal. The Protective Order then specifically defines "Confidential Material" as meeting a two part, conjunctive test. It must be "trade secret...or protected by Rule 26(c)(1)(g) and 45(c)(3)(B)(i)" and be "designated as 'Confidential' under this Agreement." Simply placing the confidential legend on the face of the document, thus designating it as "Confidential," does not automatically mean that the information is covered by the Agreement or subject to the terms of the Protective Order.

8. In its April 20, 2012 response to the Florida Creditors' request to remove the "confidential" seal from a limited number of specific documents, Fifth Third challenged the Florida Creditors' request as "untimely," relying on a 20 day window within which to challenge the designation set forth in the Stipulation. But, the Agreement and Order also states in paragraph 12, "the Receiving Party's failure to challenge the classification of any material designated as Confidential Material shall not be deemed a waiver or admission that any such classification is proper." Thus, before Fifth Third can assert that any of the documents it has produced with the "confidential" legend are actually subject to the terms of the September 30, 2011 Protective Order, it must meet its burden of specifying that the information contained therein falls within the Rule 26(c) limitations. It is simply inconceivable that each and every page of 30,000 documents, including benign emails and vague Outlook appointment schedules, reveals trade secrets of Fifth Third which would somehow jeopardize the bank's competitive advantage. Rather, the rote designation of every document and virtually every line of testimony as "confidential" is nothing more than an attempt to hamstring the Receiving Parties and to make it difficult to expose the bank's conduct to the public scrutiny it deserves.

WHEREFORE, First Bank requests an immediate order that all of the documents made available to the public pursuant to the Metcalfe County Order, specifically including, but not limited to, the Exhibits identified in Attachment 2 of this Motion, are exempt from any restrictions imposed by this Court's September 30, 2011 Protective Order.

Respectfully submitted,

DEFENDANTS

This matter came before the Court on December 13, 2011 with regard to making certain discovery documents a matter of public record. It has been the customary practice of this Court in both Barren and Metcalfe Counties for the Commonwealth to file all discovery documents with the Circuit Clerk. Pursuant to the recent adoption of CR 7.03, it appears that records made a matter of public record should redacted to exclude the social-security number, taxpayer- identification number, birth date and financial-account number or an individual or other entity. Information protected by 18 U.S.C. § 5318 should also be redacted.

The Court recognizes that a number of individuals may have sustained losses on November 2, 2010 as a result of checks issued for the purchase of cattle on behalf of Eastern Livestock Co., LLC. A significant public interest exists with regard to the discovery materials identified by the Commonwealth. The Court has carefully weighed the public's right to know and the right of the defendants to receive a fair trial. The Court being otherwise sufficiently advised,

Pursuant to RCr 5.24(1), IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, sua sponte, as follows:

1. All bank records of Eastern Livestock Co., LLC at Fifth Third Bank contained in the discovery materials identified by the Commonwealth herein shall be redacted as soon as practical by the Commonwealth pursuant to CR 7.03, and three copies thereof shall be filed with the Metcalfe Circuit Court on CDs or DVDs, and made a matter of public record. Three copies of the un-redacted bank records along with the un-redacted records, materials and audio recordings identified in paragraph 4 herein shall within 20 days be filed by the Commonwealth with the Metcalfe Circuit Court Clerk on CDs or DVDs, the said records to be held under seal pursuant to CR 7.03(3) and released only subject to the terms and conditions set forth in this Order.

2 A copy of the bank records of Eastern Livestock Co., LLC at Fifth Third Bank may be accessed by any member of the public at such time as redaction is completed by the Commonwealth. An un-redacted copy of the bank records, materials and recordings identified in paragraph 4 may be secured by a licensed attorney who subjects himself to the jurisdiction of this Court and executes the Protective Order entered by this Court with regard thereto. Any attorney who secures a copy of any un-redacted records, materials or recordings shall redact said records in compliance with CR 7.03. Further, any material protected by 18 U.S.C. ' 5318 shall also be redacted by any attorney receiving these records. Failure to comply with this Order shall subject the offending attorney to sanctions for contempt or other sanctions deemed appropriate by the Court.

3. The discovery materials, including the Grand Jury recordings on 08-16-11 and 09-22-11, audio or transcribed statements of defendants, witness summaries, law enforcement reports and three CDs containing proprietary software of Fifth Third Bank to search checks, shall remain confidential, except that counsel for the defendants in the above styled action may divulge such information as may be necessary in preparing their case for trial or other disposition. The Court notes that while the case is pending these items are not considered subject to open record requests.

4. The remaining discovery documents and all audio recordings of non-defendants referenced in the Commonwealth=s Response to the Court=s Order of Discovery filed in the above styled actions on November 7, 2011, including all emails, other documents and records of Fifth Third Bank, Community Trust, Town and Country, Your Community and applicable passwords to access said documents, shall be designated as confidential and three copies thereof filed by the office of the Kentucky Attorney General with the Metcalfe Circuit Clerk on CDs or DVDs, the said materials and audio recordings to be held by the Clerk under seal. A copy of these documents, records and audio recordings may be secured by a member of the public by and through their attorney who acknowledges and executes the Protective Order set forth herein.

5. The discovery materials identified as confidential in paragraph 4 of this Order shall be subject to the following Protective Order:

A. Access to and disclosure of information and/or documents designated as confidential shall be limited to:

(1) An attorney representing an individual or other legal entity that alleges a loss from the sale of livestock on or about November 2, 2011 at the Edmonton Buying Station

(2) Outside experts or outside consultants of the Receiving Party whose advice and consultation are being or will be used in connection with preparation for the litigation or the litigation of an action to collect claimed damages referenced herein;

(3) A witness, deponent, or potential witness or deponent, and his/her counsel, during the course of or in preparation for this litigation;

(4) The Court, court reporters, or other Court personnel involved in the adjudicative process; and

COMMONWEALTH'S RESPONSE TO MOTION TO DISCLOSE DISCOVERY MATERIALS

THOMAS GIBSON, ET AL

DEFENDANT

Comes now the Commonwealth, by counsel, Assistant Attorney General F. Todd Lewis, and for its Response to a Motion to Disclose Discovery Materials, brought by counsel for certain named victims; and for its Response to Defendant Grant Gibson's Opposition to that Motion, states as follows:

INTRODUCTION

The Commonwealth wishes only to clarify herein the state of the law on this subject. The issue appears to be so highly discretionary with the trial court, within certain guidelines. The Commonwealth does not wish to be a party to over-publicizing the evidence in the case, in order to abide by its ethical obligations¹; nor to unduly deprive the victims of information about the case and proceedings. It appears that the Court could legitimately deny the request; but that also, if granted, the disclosure should be narrowly tailored to balance the interests involved.

¹ The ethical restrictions involved include SCR 3.130 (Rule 3.6: Trial Publicity). There is no indication in this rule that interactions with victims, even numerous victims, involves a "public communication."

FILED IN MY OFFICE
THIS 9 DAY OF Dec 2011
TOMMY A. GARRETT, CLERK
BY [Signature]

BACKGROUND

On November 16, 2011, counsel for various named victims in this case filed a Motion seeking an Order directing that all documents and recordings “referenced in” the Commonwealth’s Response to the Court’s Order of Discovery, be made public. At a regularly-scheduled pretrial conference in this action on November 22, 2011, the Motion was referenced by the Court, and all parties were given an opportunity to state a position on the matter. Three Defendants (Tommy Gibson, Steve McDonald and Darren Branger) stated no objection to the Motion. Defendant Grant Gibson, at that time, stated an objection essentially seeking to exclude a single investigative report which contained statements made to investigators by Grant Gibson’s counsel. The Commonwealth stated it would review the law and respond, but that should the Motion be well-taken or have no opposition, the Commonwealth would seek at least a protective order with regard to matters which may be required to be redacted or confidential pursuant to

Later, in a pleading received by the Commonwealth on November 28, 2011², Defendant Grant Gibson stated a general opposition to granting any part of the victims’ requested relief, essentially stating that the movants have no standing, that the Court has no authority to disclose the records, and that Grant Gibson will be denied a fair trial if the material is disclosed.

LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Defendant Grant Gibson cites Courier-Journal v. McDonald Burkman, 298 S.W.3d 846 (Ky. 2009) for a simplistic, blanket proposition that discovery documents “are not subject to public disclosure,” but this is not exactly what the Supreme Court held. In McDonald-Burkman, ² The Certificate on this pleading states that it was mailed on November 19, 2011—before the pretrial conference of November 22, 2011—but it was not received by the Commonwealth until November 28, 2011.

a trial court had sealed from public disclosure discovery documents in perhaps the most notorious and widely-publicized case of child rape and murder in modern Louisville history. The largest newspaper in the state then sought a writ against the trial court, claiming a special First Amendment right, and a common law right, to public disclosure of the documents.

The Supreme Court's decision in McDonald-Burkman could have been clearer, but it did provide some guidance. The Court first noted that it was not going to recognize a special right of the media, rooted in the First Amendment, to access pretrial discovery documents. That, of course, is no issue here since the media is not the requestor.

The Court also discussed, however, the fact that the common law did recognize some "right of access [which] includes the right to inspect and copy public records and documents. Documents accessible under this common law right may, however, be 'sealed if the right to access is outweighed by the interests favoring non-disclosure.'" McDonald-Burkman, 298 S.W.3d at 849, citing Noble, 92 S.W.3d at 731 (internal citations omitted). The Court further explained that the decision was one largely for the discretion of the trial court, in which the trial court must first decide whether the documents sought belong in a category of those documents which play "a great role in determine the substantive rights of the parties, or only a minor or negligible such role:"

This Court, in Noble, outlined a sliding-scale approach to determine how much weight to give the presumption of access to court documents and records. Documents and records that play a great role in determining the substantive rights of parties are afforded the greatest weight, and only compelling reasons can deny access to the public. Id. at 732. Those that play only a "minor or negligible role in adjudicating the rights of the litigants" are accordingly offered little weight. Id.

The conclusion of the Supreme Court in McDonald-Burkman, then, was that discovery documents which were not pleadings or had not attained any evidentiary value by yet being offered to the Court as any kind of exhibit, were to be given less weight as public documents, at least as weighed against the countervailing interests in keeping the documents sealed. This would be in comparison to items like pleadings or exhibits already offered in court, which the Court saw as weighing heavily in favor of disclosure.

The countervailing interests against disclosure, on the other hand, included a Defendant's claim, where legitimate, that the disclosure would harm his ability to seat a fair jury. This was seen as heightened importance in the case of the criminal Defendant Cecil New, against whom the Commonwealth was seeking the death penalty. Additionally, it was noted that none of the evidence against New had been made public at the time the Court was deciding the McDonald-Burkman case³. Finally, the Court noted that the evidence in question, related to the abduction, rape and murder of a four-year-old child, was "inflammatory, graphic, and possibly irrelevant." Id.

Here, it is not exactly clear how the court should weigh the interests in question. It is not quite as clear as Grant Gibson contends, however. First, this is definitely a case that has been widely publicized, although the several related non-criminal proceedings probably garner as much or more attention than this indictment. Those other cases include:

(1) There is a bankruptcy case pending for the principle corporation, Eastern Livestock, and against the Defendant Tommy Gibson, in the United States Bankruptcy Court in the Southern District of Indiana.

(2) There is, or was, a state-court receivership case pending in Hamilton County

Common Pleas Court in Cincinnati, Ohio, sought at the behest of Fifth Third Bank.

Because the requestor in McDonald-Burkman was a media outlet and not a member of the Bar, there obviously was no opportunity to consider how a trial court may limit disclosure in this manner.

WHEREFORE, the Commonwealth respectfully requests that any ordered disclosure of the discovery documents and recordings in this case be ordered only with suitable protective provisions restricting the use of such items, so as to protect against any undue publication of such items outside the course of judicial proceedings.

Respectfully submitted,

JACK CONWAY
